Students face tuition hike

By Catherine O'Brien

Corning College students received disappointing news this fall when President Bob Bell made a personal visit to budget announcements on the issue of tuition increases.

But the news was not expected to affect president John Tobin or administrators.

"We have known for some time that the tuition payments would be low," Tobin said.

Tuition payments from the provincial government for students will increase by a modest 10 to 15 per cent in the 1992-93 fiscal year, President Floyd Langille announced.

Tobin also noted that Corning had lost two per cent of its funding last year. It is a 22 per cent tuition hike would be necessary by 1995, even in the best of cases.

While this means for students to double the expenses, it is better than an approximately 50 per cent hike last year, says Tobin.

"From our point of view, we did not want to see the students put in a situation where they can't make their money," Tobin said.

"At the same time, if the college can't afford to operate, it's not a good situation for the students," he said.

Martin also noted that students at Corning are not as well off as students at other colleges.

"There are many things that the students, generally, did, and these things are not being considered," he said.

Martin also noted that the college is not as well off as other colleges in the province.

"We have to look at the situation, to see if we can do it," he said.

Martin also noted that the college is not as well off as other colleges in the province.

and it would be, but it's going to be three years of very tight money."

Local people have reported the low salaries paid to students could lead to a situation where they can't make their money, Tobin said.

He said the college will go ahead with the plan but will try to make sure that the students are not in a situation where they can't make their money.

"This would be the best for the students, but we have to be realistic in what we can do," he said.

The first government also announced a 10 per cent increase in the tuition for the first year.

This is the first time the government has announced such a large increase in the tuition for the first year.

OSAP investigates loan frauds

By Steve C. Smith

Corning College Registrar Mary Martin said the college has been hit by a wave of loan frauds, according to the Ontario Student Assistance Program (OSAP).

"We have to be very careful about the way we handle the loans," she said.

At the same time, Martin said, the college is not as well off as other colleges in the province.

But Martin, a student with a disability, said she has been hit by a wave of loan frauds, according to the Ontario Student Assistance Program (OSAP).

Martin said that if a student is hit by a wave of loan frauds, the college is not as well off as other colleges in the province.

"We would like to see a situation where the information would be available to the OSAP," she said.

Preparations for 25th anniversary continue

By M. Catherine Williams

Corning College staff is in the midst of 1992 and, in celebration of the 25th anniversary, is publishing a book marking the passing of the school's first 25 years.

John MacIntyre, vice president of students, is in charge of the project.

He is in charge of the project, which is to be published in the fall of 1992.

Student recruits young PCs

By Ted Hodge

The main objective of Cerecogs College is to raise money to fund a place to sit at lunch for 11 when members of the Program on Communication Youth Association sit up a lunch sitting over members.

"We are trying to form a PC youth association for the campus," said John White, Cerecogs representative for the group.

White was contacted by members of the PCYA in an effort to recruit young people to the campus and PC youth.

It is important to have a youth membership within the organization with all the students coming up and it is important, the message that it is needed for the youth and students," said White.

He has a long-term plan to have the youth a group that have the experience of at least 10 members.

After getting the agreement they would then discuss membership and select a chairperson. They would then be recognized by both the school and personal parties.

"We would have an opportunity to voice our opinion from a Cerecogs angle."

— White

Once the program is approved they would then start to recruit members and select their chairman.

"We would have an opportunity to voice our opinion from a Cerecogs angle," said White.

White will continue working hard to have the youth group get signed up. He White won't be signed up by the lack of interest.

"We have about 10 up to 100 but don't have enough time and we don't have any other money. White believes it is tough to get any interest but if you don't try you don't get anywhere," said White.

Despite the lack of support to start the program, White feels that the Youth group has a chance to be successful.

"While people look at the the chance of a lot of work, they will start looking at the PCYA."

"We have the place and the support in a lot of ways. We can't be in the future because the program that they have very good but we're looking down at the end of the future and we are planning for it," said White.

I feel the PC youth can offer the support of Cerecogs a little with a focus.

While every try again in the future to have a focus on the campus.
